George,

On how I felt and how I conducted myself when I first went to New Orleans and testified before the grand jury: when I came out I refused to say a word about what I'd been asked or what I'd said. The reporters didn't like that a bit and the stories reflect this. Apparently I was the only one who took this position.